This Is How Hitler's Submarine Menace Is Being Beaten

A FULLY SURFACED U-BOAT provides a "sitting duck" target for the B-24 bomber which is surprising it while on sea patrol. In the left picture the plane, piloted by Capt. Lawrence Janagan, Jr., of Stamps, Ark., starts its run preparatory to dropping depth charges. Note the men on deck. In the middle photo the depth charges have exploded to envelop the sub (right photo) and sweep the men from the deck. The undersea craft was severely damaged perhaps sunk. These pictures were passed by the War Department.

I understand the oldest house in Buena Vista is being remodeled.

It is a brick structure, built of brick made near the town approximately 100 years ago, and the old brick house is supposed to have been the nucleus about which the village was built.

It has been owned by Lon Feagans for many years, and now Lon is equipping it with new windows and making other improvements that will place the house in condition for many more years of occupancy.

Have you noticed the unusually large number of violent electrical storms that have swept Fayette County during the last six months?

I have, and believe that there has been more lightning in the county during the six months than during the last four years put together.

As I recall the first electrical storm occurred in February, which is early indeed for such storms.

During the season there have been scores of electrical storms in the county, and lightning has struck at least 1,000 times within the county, and that is a great deal of lightning.

Considering the large amount of lightning the damage has been surprisingly light.

Wherever and whoever George M. Bacon is, he might be interested to know that his certificate from the Briggs Manufacturing Company in Detroit as an Aircraft Turret Maintenance man was found on Court Street in Washington C. H.

A stranger in town found the certificate and turned it in to Miss Ruth Cardiff, secretary to County School Superintendent W. J. Hilty, at his office in the Court House.

The certificate, dated August 9 and most officially sealed with a gold stamp and green ribbon, was evidently presented to Bacon when he completed a six weeks course at the Briggs plant.

Anyone who can identify a five-inch long, slimy animal which resembles a snail but has no shell, is buff-orange with black leopard spots and which exudes a sticky white substance will earn Frank Grubbs' gratitude.

Grubbs saw the animal on his well curbing Thursday night and at first thought it was a lizard because of its length. When he captured it, he classified it as a snail but he isn't so sure now.

Anyone have any solution?

SUPPORT FOR PRICES OF FOOD PROMISED

Assurance Given Farms That Risks Will Be Covered

WASHINGTON, Aug. 28.—(AP)—A pledge by War Food Administrator Marvin Jones that food prices would be supported at a level high enough to cover "the added risks and hazards that go with increased production" drew today the commendation of Chairman Fulmer (D., S. C.) of the House Agriculture committee.

Conspicuous by its absence from Jones' address last night was any reference to organized labor's demands for price rollbacks to the consumer. He did, however, say that the mechanics of the 1944 food program would be advanced "step-by-step" with specific support prices disclosed far enough in advance to allow farmers to plan accordingly.

GREEN AND BLACK BOOK OF NAMES SEIZED FROM DETROIT "COUNTESS" BY FBI HOLDS KEY TO SPY RING'S ACTIVITIES

By AL KAUFMAN

DETROIT, Mich. — Federal Bureau of Investigation secrecy shrouds Detroit's melodramatic international spy plot today, but when the complete story is unfolded shortly in federal court it will center around the glamorous "Countess Grace" Buchanan-Dineen, "Mati Hari" of World War II.

For when the FBI crushed the Nazi ring assigned to garner information on America's war production and potential sabotage soft spots, it also snared the lovely "countess" and her little green and black book containing 200 names.

The significance of those unidentified is known only to the FBI but six of that last are already behind bars awaiting trial for treason that may lead to death. In addition to "Countess" Grace, they are:

Countess Marianna Von Molke, wife of a Wayne university (Detroit) professor and mother of two children. She is charged by the FBI with "trying to instill college students in Detroit with Nazi state socialism."

Mrs. Emma Leonhardt, a Detroit housewife, known to her associates as "Mamma," who allegedly allowed use of her home as a spy ring headquarters. She is described as the wife of the Detroit bund founder and mother of a girl who took special spy training in Berlin.

Mrs. Theresa Wassertauer Behrens, 44, a social worker and executive secretary of the YWCA International Center.

Ex-U. S. Sailor Nabbed

Bertrand Stuart Hoffman, 27, a former U. S. Navy sailor, arrested on a ship in New York, where he was enrolled as a merchant seaman and about to sail with a Europe-bound convoy.

Dr. Fred William Thomas, 44, American-born surgeon with a flourishing practice, a staff member of leading Detroit hospitals and a draft board medical examiner.

More arrests were expected. Their roles, however, are secondary to that of the dark-haired "Countess" Grace—the "a" pronounced like in father-daughter.

SEVEN SOLDIERS WED BY WOMAN

And She Admits to FBI She Didn't 'Bother To Divorce
Any of Them'

CINCINNATI, Aug. 28.—(AP)—A blonde-haired, 34-year-old mother awaited extradition to Arizona today after admitting to FBI agents she was married to seven soldiers "without bothering to divorce any of them." Alan H. Belmont, district FBI chief, disclosed.

The woman, Vivian Eggers, was being held in the city prison at Columbus, following her guilty plea before U. S. Commissioner Robert Newton on a charge of feloniously obtaining a soldier's $50 allowance check.

She is accused of unlawfully representing herself to be the wife of a Phoenix, Ariz., soldier in order to obtain his check. The soldier, Gordon H. Campbell, was not one of her husbands, the FBI said.

Belmont said the woman told FBI agents she married five privates, a sergeant and a lieutenant from May, 1935, to June, 1943.

"You just get to drinking and having a good time, you meet some one that's kinda nice—and that's the way it happens," she was quoted by the FBI.

HAMILTON, N. Y., Aug. 28.—(AP)—Naval sea-air power "will continue to supply the big punch in the Pacific until United States troops have landed on the shores of Japan," Navy Secretary Frank Knox declared today.

Addressing a Colgate University Navy convocation-college commencement program at which he received an honorary doctorate of laws, Knox added in his prepared speech:

"Since the day of Pearl Harbor the bulk of the Navy's fighting sea and air power has been employed in the Pacific theater and will remain there until Tojo's final day is done."

NEW PLANE FUEL IS 'SUPER GAS'

Engines Must Be Made Over
Before They Can Use It To Increase Power

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 28.—(AP)—America now can produce a super-gas that will boost airplane engine power 50 percent.

The gas can be blended with the usual 100-octane aircraft gasoline to increase power somewhat, but engines must be made over before they can use the new fuel undiluted.

Dr. Gustav Egloff made public the discovery of the new production process.

Dr. Egloff told the northern California post-war conference of the National Association of Manufacturers that the gas was called "Triptane" to "conceal research" made in the development of the process.

Chemists, he said, have known of the gas for seven years, but until now, industry has not been able to produce the fuel in quantity.

The first gallon cost $3,000. Now the pilot plant has been

5-point Farm Program Proposed By Bricker

RAPID CITY, S. D., Aug. 28.—(AP)—Gov. John W. Bricker of Ohio last night proposed a farm program geared of "impractical directives hanging as a millstone around the neck of the producers of farm products."

In a public address, Gov. Bricker said that bureaucratic are hindering American initiative and enterprise, particularly in the field of agriculture, and suggested a five-point farm program. His proposals were:

(1) "That the food problem can be solved by a complete change of procedure on the part of the Centralized Bureaucratic Administration in Washington responsible for the confusion of impractical directives hanging as a millstone around the neck of the producers and distributors of farm products.

(2) "That government restrictions that interfere with the laws of supply and demand; as to discourage all-out production, be removed.

NUERNBERG IS IN RUINS

British and Americans Take

By WILLIAM SMITH WHITE

LONDON, Aug. 28.—(AP)—Immense formations of British bombers said by coastal observers to be the greatest force ever sent over Germany bashed Nuernberg last night, throwing down hundreds of tons of explosives on that southern German industrial city and center of Nazidom.

The Air Ministry called it a "very heavy attack" — which meant that the British threw in an assault intended virtually to obliterate the targets.

It was a night of wide operations from this great air base — with Mosquito attacks on the Ruhr, fighter and intruder sweeps against railways and Axis airfields in France and the low countries. Thirty-three British bombers were lost.

The Nazi-controlled Vichy radio reported the RAF was over northern France again this morning, but there was no confirmation of this.

The Nuernberg attack was the RAF's second major assault of the week, Berlin having been blasted on a colossal scale Monday night, and with fire and bursting steel last night's raid answered the declaration by Nazi Labor Chief Robert Ley:

"Owing to its formidable position, Nuernberg is well-protected against air attacks."

It was a round-trip flight of RUSHVILLE, Ind., Aug. 28.—(AP)—A month's sojourn here, during which Wendell L. Willkie conferred with scores of Republican leaders from all parts of the nation, ended today as the titular head of the G. O. P. started back to New York.

At his departure he was as reticent about discussing politics as when he arrived.

Reds Open Assault On Another Sector

MOSCOW, Aug. 28.—(AP)—The Russian army has struck west in a new sector and overwhelmed the German defenses at Sevsk, midway between and west of Orel and Belgorod, a communique announced last night.

The new drive is the fourth major drive undertaken by the Red army since the summer of offensive began July 5.

The new advances place the Russians almost 500 miles from Stalingrad, where last winter's far-reaching drive began, and has carried them to a point more than half way from Stalingrad to the Polish border.

In capturing Sevsk, the war bulletin said, the Russians wiped out more than 5,000 Germans and took 700 more prisoners.

The Sevsk attack is part of the general Russian program to push the Nazis back to the Dnieper River, their main line of defense.

On the Kharkov front, 130 miles south of Sevsk, Russian units captured the town of Kotlov, 33 miles from the German base of Poltava, the communique said.

It was here that the Red forces had passed the half-way point to the Polish border.

The Nazis bitterly contested the advance, the bulletin reported, and 3,000 Germans were killed in the battle. At Aktykra, 60 miles northwest of Kharkov, 2,000 more Germans were killed in a two-day battle.

The Russians said that the advance upon Bryansk, a major German bastion at the northern end of the central front, had been considerably slowed as the troops entered an area of forest and swamp land.

RATIONING TO BE EASED FOR COMMERCIAL TIRES

WASHINGTON, Aug. 28.—(AP)—The Office of Price Administration (OPA) announced today that, effective September 2, tire rationing would be relaxed so that operators of commercial vehicles could obtain certificates for recapping service or new tubes, regardless of the use to which their machines are put. Previously operators of non-essential vehicles were denied the certificates.

Vital Transportation System

Allied Attack

MANY OF ENEMY DOWNED

Assault Diversified Against Freight Yards in Many Parts of Big Area

By NOLAND NORGAAARD

ALLIED HEADQUARTERS IN NORTH AFRICA, Aug. 28.—(AP)—Southern Italy's entire railway system has been disorganized by relentless Allied bombings, with train traffic brought almost to a standstill, it was disclosed at headquarters today.

The railroads are kingpin in Italy's defenses.

The announcement followed a heavy blast by U. S. Flying Fortresses yesterday at railroad yards at Salomona nearly 100 miles east of Rome for the first time, and Mitchell bomber attacks on congested freight yards and locomotive works at Benevento near Naples.

At the same time, American B-26 Marauders bombed the rail yards at Caserta also in Naples vicinity, and light and medium bombers including A-36 fighter bombers attacked targets at Catanzaro, Sibari, Cetraro and Paola.

Enemy fighter resistance increased over the vital rail centers, and 20 enemy planes were shot down, Allied headquarters declared.

The worst beating was administered to the Germans by the Mitchells, which sent 16 Nazi planes crashing to the ground out of a total of 40 to 50 fighters which sought to turn back the bombers and their P-38 escort.

Almost two dozen fighters also pounced on the Fortresses which likewise were escorted by Lightnings.

In the Caserta attack, 35 to 45 fighters came up to intercept the Marauders but they were driven off by Lightnings.

The day's operations also included attacks by fighter-bombers on gun positions near Reggio Calabria from which the enemy has been shelling the Messina area off Sicily, and RAF Wellingtons followed up last night by pounding the freight yards at Salerno.

ONLY ONE JAP BASE LEFT IN SOLOMONS

Only Mopping Up Left for

By WILLIAM HUPPLE

THE SOUTH PACIFIC, Aug. 28.—(AP)—American occupation of Bairoko on New Georgia Island leaves Bougainville as the only Japanese operating base in the Solomon Islands and dooms the enemy garrison of possibly 10,000 men on Kolombangara Island, a navy spokesman said today.

The spokesman for Adm. William F. Halsey, Jr., commander of South Pacific forces, said Bairoko "closed the book" on the 57-day New Georgia campaign except for minor operations. "It was a most satisfying show," he added. "Our losses in personnel and materiel were light, both compared to the Japanese losses and what we had expected we would have to pay."

NEW PROBLEMS FOR LIVESTOCK SHIPPING ARISE

Old Yards May Have To Be Rejuvenated To Facilitate Railroad Transportation

CHICAGO, Aug. 28.—(AP)—The Bureau of Agricultural Economics said today that the livestock transportation situation under wartime conditions "may become critical by fall."

Encouraging the use of railroads in place of motor transportation for livestock, the bureau said, "with shortages of tires, gasoline, and motor trucks reducing the volume of motor transportation of livestock, a renewed dependence upon rail transportation is being felt by producers in many areas."

The government agency explained that before the war, transportation had been shifting rapidly from rail to motor truck and that by 1941 a large part of the supply that was received at important public stockyards in the country came by truck.

However, with the few new motor trucks available and with the present difficulty in getting repairs, the bureau said, "something of a reverse swing is under way," and, "programs for truck conservation have been put into effect in many sections."

The agency said, "Local rail stockyards in some areas apparently need repairs if they are to be used more extensively," and, "many towns have no stockyards, chiefly because old yards have been abandoned."

If repairs are needed to make existing yards usable, or if more yards are needed, the government urged that "steps should be taken to provide them."

"Some shift to rail transportation has been made, and more can be expected," the bureau said, "and under the circumstances,

CARE OF POULTRY GETS GOOD RESULTS

Forty Percent Losses Reported From Preventable Causes

More care in the henhouse would put 200,000,000 dozen more eggs on America's breakfast tables and 100,000,000 additional pounds of chicken on Sunday dinner platters.

This would be possible if only 5 percent of needless disease losses were prevented in adult poultry flocks, says Dr. Cliff D. Carpenter of the United States Department of Agriculture.

And not just 5 percent, but a 50 percent reduction in poultry losses could be accomplished by applying modern proved means of disease control to flocks, Dr. Carpenter told the war conference of the American Veterinary Medical Association.

"The nation may fail to meet its 1943 production goals," he added gloomily, "unless vigorous steps are taken to meet this problem."

The rate of mortality after chicks leave the brooder house has doubled since 1920 in many areas, he reported, and poultrymen lose 35 to 40 percent of their laying flocks from preventable causes.

Corn and Oats Insufficient To Meet Wartime Needs' For More Meat

CHICAGO, Aug. 28.—(AP)—Millions of bushels of milling wheat, ordinarily used almost exclusively for human consumption, have been fed to livestock and poultry this year, grain men stated today.

The amount of corn and oats available has not been sufficient to feed the record numbers of livestock and poultry in the country, grain men explained, and the result has been a heavy utilization of what was once considered the country's bread grain.

Sales of wheat for use as feed by the Commodity Credit Corporation during the past month totaled around 50,000,000 bushels. This is wheat the agency took over when farmers did not redeem their government loans on the grain, or which was purchased in the open market.

Grain men asserted this was a very heavy sales rate—if continued for a year it would total 600,000,000 bushels. But it was generally expected that the CCC's selling of feed wheat would fall off later in the year, when the 1943 corn crop should be moving to market in volume.

While the feed situation generally is recognized as serious at the moment, particularly in the east, there were many grain men who felt it might become critical later in the year.

Latest reports on the corn crop are not as encouraging as they were only two weeks ago. The major corn belt still appears to be headed for an excellent crop, according to trade advisers, but there has been considerable deterioration in other sections.

EMERGENCY LOANS ARE NOW AVAILABLE

Financing of Small Farmers Primary Purpose

G. M. Rhodes, field supervisor of the Emergency Crop and Feed Loan Office, Farm Credit Administration, announced today that loans are available to farmers for the purchase of feed for livestock and poultry and the production of winter grains and hay crops to be harvested, including seed, feed, fuel and oil, repairs and other expenses incidental to the production and harvesting of crops.

Applications for these loans are being received by Mrs. Hazel Beatty at the agricultural agent's office in Washington C. H.

Such loans are made to small farmers, either owners or tenants, who own or have the use of the necessary work stock and equipment, need funds to meet their cash requirements, can give a first lien on their crop and cannot obtain a loan on reasonable terms from other sources.

Land Values In Fayette County Set National Pace For Increase

Fayette County is in an area in which farm values have gone higher and faster than anywhere else in the country, a survey by rural economists just released discloses.

Ohio farms, they say, have risen 28 percent in value since 1928 and are increasing in value faster than the average for all farm lands in the country where the average increase has been only 18 percent in the last three and a half years.

The situation here today, the survey showed, is just the reverse of the trend during and after the first World War when the value of Ohio farms rose 59 percent while that of the rest of the country was going up 70 percent.

Real estate dealers and farmers familiar with the situation could offer no reason for the increase in land values in this section at a rate at such variance with the rest of the country, other than farms, were

Present Tenants Are Given Opportunity To Purchase Homes Where They Live

A number of units in the Farm Security Administration area in the Atlanta neighborhood and southern Fayette County will have new occupants within the next few months, it is reported. Several of the 20-odd units there have been purchased by the families formerly under contract and residing upon them, but the rest will probably be sold to new owners, it was said.

The Scioto Farms Rural Resettlement project in Fayette, Pickaway and Madison counties is being liquidated by the government, although present tenants were given an opportunity to buy properties in which they live and the farms have started to move into private ownership.

A. L. Sorensen, State Farm Security Administrator, has started that about 30 of 107 tenant farmers in the project district have made or are making arrangements to buy the government properties. Some of the men making purchases are farmers who have been on the land since the project was started six years ago.

CORN IMPROVEMENT BRIGHTENS OUTLOOK

Much of It Now Out of Danger Of Normal Frost

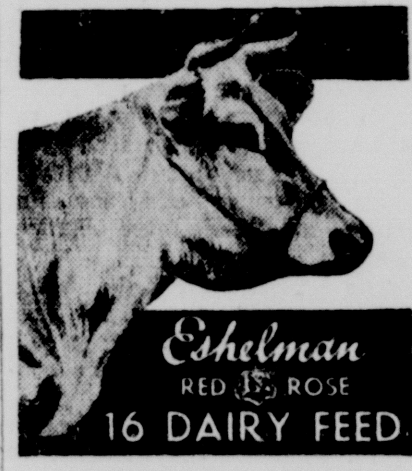

The farm outlook was brightened considerably here in this county where corn is one of the keynotes of the agricultural program which is based on livestock feeding, farmers agree as day by day the crop develops and approaches maturity.

Off to a late start because of prolonged spring rains, the corn has made progress far beyond the expectations of most farmers and the last few weeks admittedly have brought hundreds of acres of it virtually out of danger of frost—unless one should slip in ahead of normal.

Crop estimates for the state indicate prospects have improved 3,450,000 bushels but the expected yield for Ohio will be 40,000,000 less than last year. And in spite of the improvement reports both from over the county and the state are that there is still much late-planted corn that would be caught by an early or even a normal frost.

The corn is being watched with more than usual interest here this year because of the increase expected in livestock production to meet wartime requirements.

Corn cutting is reported to have started in a few places in the county already. Much of the corn is expected to be picked in the field, which may lead to a shortage of fodder.

On the Farm By Thomas E. Berry

By THOMAS E. BERRY
ARGUMENTS FOR LATE CORN

While there isn't very much to say for raising late corn, there is something to say for it, that I saw demonstrated this week. A storm had blown down an early planted field, but one evidently planted two weeks later and much smaller was standing well, except in a few places, and even there it was straightening up fast, for the ears had not yet formed, and the growth was incomplete.

The late planted corn ripens at a time when most of the destructive storms are over, so the hazard of lodging is reduced, and when it does lodge it straightens up in a hurry.

Another argument for some late planting was well demonstrated on another farm, where the first planting in a large field was in tassel, while the last planting was at least two weeks behind the first. "The corn won't

Peak Hit By Hog Market On Recent Bulge, Belief

The recent bulge in the hog market which carried prices to $15-plus has reached its peak, in the opinion of Frank DeWitt, veteran stock buyer and market analyst of Fayette County.

In the following article, in which the opinions expressed are the writer's own and do not necessarily reflect the views of this newspaper, DeWitt writes that the livestock markets as a whole have been unsteady and implies that the threat of a government price ceiling will keep prices from going much higher.

By FRANK DEWITT

The hog market has been very nervous during the past week with comparatively light receipts. That $15 mark and over, registered on the recent bulge, is, in my opinion, about the extent of the upturn at this time. Nothing new is known about the prospective ceiling of $14.75 but the way Washington does things it would probably be announced overnight if the market showed any signs of moving to higher levels. The idea, as I see it, is to bring about an orderly marketing of hogs between $14 and $15 with lighter weights most desirable.

In the cattle market the bulk of good steers moved at $14 to $16. An extreme top of $16.60 was quoted. Good heifers brought $15.75 with medium grades going at $13.75. Heavy sausage bulls continued in good demand with a practical top of $14.35.

Reopening of Burma Road By Allies To Aid China Is Indicated by New Strategy

The extraordinary enthusiasm being exhibited by the Allied nations over the appointment of Lord Louis Mountbatten as supreme commander for southeast Asia is at once a tribute of confidence in his leadership and an expression of relief that, as the Chinese put it, "measures planned for the destruction of Japan are being implemented."

Specifically, the designation of this 43-year-old expert in combined operations—invasions involving land, sea and air forces—is taken generally to mean that at long last the Allies are getting set to invade Burma from India, across the Bay of Bengal. Since America's combined forces are on the offensive in the southwest Pacific, one envisages the application of a pincers movement ultimately on the Nipponese—one from the east.

Small wonder that the Chinese are elated at the prospect of reopening the Burma Road, to restore their lifeline to the outside world. They were terribly disappointed that the operation wasn't carried out last winter, as I learned on my visit to Chungking the first of this year.

The Chinese are in dire need of supplies of every description, both military and civilian. It's one of the world's wonders that they've been able to hang on so long. It would be dangerous to bank on their ability to continue indefinitely without the major assistance which can be supplied only by the reopening of the Burmese backdoor.

Readers often ask why the Allies have to invade Burma by sea—why the invasion can't be carried out from India by land. The mountainous nature of the terrain, and the heart-breaking jungles, along the Indo-Burmese border preclude big scale military operations. There are places where small contingents of troops can operate—on the coast, for instance, and up north where a military road cuts through the mountains at Imphal—but the main attack must be amphibious, supported by air.

The youthful new commander for southeast Asia has, in his all-ways vigorous way, flung his six feet four of hard muscle into his new job with a rush. That's good to see, but we shouldn't conclude from the announcements and the preparations that an invasion of Burma is going to take place next week, or next month.

The monsoon deluge, which since April has been flooding Burma, won't be over until October. It then will be several weeks before things dry up to the point where one would expect the Allies to be ready for the attack, if indeed it's their intention to carry out the operation this year.

The conquest of Burma calls for an effort of great magnitude. A huge naval fleet—presumably British, since our ships are engaged in the Pacific—will be necessary. And as in North Africa and Sicily, the Allied air fleets will blaze the way. Fortunately, India provides a superb base for the expedition, both in the initial stages and later for reinforcements and supplies.

"Louie" Mountbatten is a jack of all trades in war, having done his good bit with air, sea and commando forces. Wherever duty takes him—and it's led him through the valley of death more than once—"his comrades label him as 'a cheerful bloke.'"

Word is being circulated in informed quarters in Washington that Lt. General Joseph W. Stilwell is slated to be deputy commander-in-chief. Stilwell now heads the U.S. army forces in China, Burma and India and is chief of staff to Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek.

If this appointment materializes it should give a fine team for the southeast Pacific. Stilwell is hard-boiled as they come—a veteran who knows his Burma and China like a book and even speaks Chinese.

all ripen at the same time, so that man will have a better chance to get it all cut, at the time it should be cut," I pointed out to a man who was riding with me, and he agreed with me.

Another very good farmer says you've got to look ahead—far ahead—these days, and not get yourself into a jam, for you are going to have most of the farm work to do, and you must do all you can to distribute it well. Planting the corn crop over a period of two or three weeks, helps in the labor distribution when harvest time comes, even though it may reduce the yield a little. If you study the records of the time of planting and the crop yield, you will find that there is some reduction in the yield if you plant, after the recommended planting date for your community, but not very much, until about ten days or two weeks beyond this date.

NEW STOCK IN MICE

When I recently left a sack of corn at our mill to be ground, that I had brought in from the farm, a very large mouse jumped out and escaped through a hole into the basement of the mill. It was one of our very largest and best mice, and it is well located, isn't it?

CONTROLLING MICE

They are hard to control in a home, and it seems impossible to keep them out. We have found that the best way to control them is to trap them, just as soon as they are discovered. We use cheese for bait and if they are not interested in that, the small spring traps are baited with a piece of uncooked bacon. That is sure to attract them. It is good bait for the wise old rats, too, that show up at times, and are able to resist most bait served to them in a trap. They just can't resist the bacon.

A big thing to do in trapping mice or rats is to keep the traps clean, and free from any odor of an injured animal, that may have been caught in it. Holding the traps in the flame of burning paper for a few minutes, is the easiest and quickest way that we have found to clean them. Doing this heats the wood a little, in addition to burning off any foreign matter, so the meal is very attractively served.

KENTUCKY WONDER BEANS

"We are picking our Kentucky Wonder beans now and we cord them up on our arms like cordwood." That's a report a friend just gave us. The Kentucky Wonder is a good bean to raise any year, and especially this year, when our growing season has been almost tropical.

This bean is good to plant with corn, after the corn gets a pretty good start, or to plant along the fence in the garden, so they can vine on it. We used them that way this year, but we had some rabbit competition, that reduced much of the stand, but still we'll have a lot of beans, if the Mexican beetle doesn't get them when we get busy and forget them. Dusting beans with rotenone will protect them but you must keep them pretty well protected, all the time, for it to be most effective.

EARLY TOMATOES

I just learned of a friend who got ten large transplanted tomato plants early in June and took the very best of care of them. "We've had all the tomatoes we wanted to use in our home for weeks," she reports. Of course she is well sold on getting the large, well started, transplanted kind of plants, even if you have to pay much more for them. This is the second report like this that I have had recently. These reports well illustrate the wisdom of buying transplanted tomato plants, early in the season, for this is an approved garden practice that is used by the very best home and commercial gardeners.

PEAK HIT BY HOG MARKET ON RECENT BULGE, BELIEF OF VETERAN ANALYST

Cows cashed from $10 to $12.50 and vealers were wanted at the $14 to $16 level.

Trade is slow on sheep and the market acts sluggish. It will work to lower levels on any increase in receipts.

A bulletin from the War Food Administration has just come to my notice and from which I quote: "Federally inspected livestock slaughterers report a total slaughter of 230,000 head of cattle during the week ending August 21, an increase of 76,000 over the low week early in July. Whereas hog slaughter dropped from 1,340,000 head during the week ending July 3 to 1,000,000 head during the week ending August 21."

"Beef production rose to 121,000,000 pounds, an increase of 2,000,000 pounds over the previous week. But pork production dropped to 160,000,000 pounds compared to 176,000,000 pounds processed during the preceding week."

These figures should be considered illustrative of a plan rather than a prediction of possible prices. My opinion is that all such statistics are being considered in Washington by a group of economists and theorists trying to control something that would control itself if the law of supply and demand were allowed to function.

HESSIAN FLY DANGER IS LESS THIS YEAR ENTOMOLOGISTS SAY

tation in Ohio wheat for the last three years, based on examination of fields in 33 counties, shows an average of 12.1 percent of plants damaged in 1941, 25.7 percent in 1942, and 4.3 percent in 1943. Warren county fields which had 52.4 percent of its wheat damaged by fly in 1942 had practically no damage in 1943.

Wheat can be protected from Hessian fly attacks by sowing the fields after the date when the adult fly prefers to lay its eggs. Observance of the fly-free dates for sowing wheat in 1943 even though the fly population has been considerably reduced is still advised.

He says that average yields of wheat, regardless of the fly, will be as high for fields sown on fly-free dates as they would have been if the wheat had been sown earlier. The observance of fly-free dates will give time for more thorough preparation of the seed bed and for applications of fertilizer which should go on all Ohio wheat in 1943.

Reduction of Hessian fly numbers will permit Ohio farmers to sow winter barley earlier than would be advisable in bad fly years. Early-sown winter barley produces better yields when in Ohio. Every Ohio county agricultural agent can give the best dates for wheat seeding in his county; the dates vary from Sept. 23 in northern Ohio to Oct. 5 in the southern counties.

Good seed wheat will be comparatively scarce in Ohio this fall. The seed should be obtained from as near the farm where it is to be planted as possible. All seed wheat should be thoroughly cleaned to remove all shriveled kernels.

Wheat yields can be increased appreciably if the seed is treated for the prevention of smut. Seed treatment does not control wheat scab but it does reduce the hazard of smut. Wheat planted following corn is more likely to become infested with scab.

OHIO LIQUOR INSURED; PREMIUM $20,000 A YEAR

COLUMBUS, Aug. 28.—(AP)—Bottled liquor in Ohio's retail stores, choice booty for thieves because of the prevailing scarcity, again is covered by burglary insurance but at a $20,000 annual premium, against a previous cost of $8,000. Liquor Director Don Fisher said today.

MATERNITY CARE AVAILABLE HERE ON STATE PLAN

Blanks for Wives of Men in Service Ready - - Physicians Have Them Now

"MCH-1 will be a by-word around here before long," Dr. W. D. Maag of the Fayette County Board of Health said today. He explained that "MCH-1" is the designation of the form to be filled out by expectant mothers who are wives of enlisted service men applying for state maternity care.

Applications are now in the hands of the physicians here, Dr. Maag said, and anyone desiring them can obtain one from the physician of her choice or Dr. Maag. MCH-2 forms are also available for state care for children one year old and under, whose fathers are enlisted men.

The program became effective August 12 in Ohio. Those eligible are wives and infants of enlisted men including the first seven grades, regardless of legal residence or financial status. However, wives of men in the first three pay grades will be required to provide the following statement: "My present financial and personal circumstances have made it necessary for me to request care for myself and my child as provided by the emergency maternity and infant care program."

After the forms are completed, the wife must present evidence to the physician that she is the wife of an enlisted man, either by her allowance card or by an envelope she has received through the mail from her husband giving his serial number. When the form is completed, the physician will send it immediately to the Division of Child Hygiene of the Ohio Department of Health for authorization for providing care.

If the form has been satisfactorily completed, and the wife is entitled to the benefits of the emergency maternity and infant care program, a notice of official authorization will be mailed to the physician, the hospital, the mother and the health department here.

Hospitalization is provided upon the request of the attending physician. Only licensed maternity hospitals in Ohio may participate in this program. Hospitalists are paid at ward rates on the basis of the following formula:

The certified per day operating costs of the hospital less 15 percent plus 25 percent, with a ceiling rate of $6.50 for mother and infant; the certified rate less 15 percent for the infant with a ceiling of $5.50 per day. A maximum of fourteen days of hospitalization is provided for maternity and infant care.

When the patient is seriously ill, the attending physician may request private duty nurses who will be authorized for a period not to exceed 14 days at prevailing rates, not to exceed $7 per day including meals. Home bedside nursing also is provided when requested by the attending physician, and qualified specialists may be called in if necessary.

The physician is granted an authorization for a period not to exceed three weeks for a maximum sum of $22, of which a maximum of $10 may be expended the first week, $6 for the second week and $6 for the third week, on a fee basis of $3 for home calls and $2 for office and hospital calls.

State Health Director R. H. Markwith has telegraphed a second emergency request to the Children's Bureau at Washington for additional federal funds to finance care for August's mothers under the Ohio maternity program for wives of servicemen.

"We'll process our 1,000th application today," Dr. Markwith said, "and most involve future births. Once we accommodate the urgent August cases the program should prove out."

The bureau allocated $20,000 to Ohio August 12 and another $20,000 last week.

"I did not specify an amount in today's request," Dr. Markwith sociation, both in quality and condition.

Mr. Wain and Mr. Jones should be congratulated on the addition to their flock.

Another Shropshire breeder from Fayette County has been keeping his flock in the lime-light with his aged ram, which was again champion at the Clinton County Fair. Mr. Beatty did not show last week but his sheep are located this week at the London Fair. The report is not in yet on that fair.

Jacob White below Good Hope, showing Dwight Johnson's Southdowns, won five firsts and the champions at Clinton County and last week at Hilliards repeated his success by taking five firsts and the champions. "Jake" is at London this week and his wins have not been reported.

Willard Bitzer's Dorsets won four firsts and champion ewe at Clinton County. All the firsts but one and champion ram at Hilliards and this week at Cadiz, Ohio, all firsts but one and both champion ewe and champion ram. Showing for ten champions this season, the Bitzer flock has only lost two champion ribbons.

Fayette County is becoming better known each year for their pure bred flocks of sheep. Fayette County has always been prominent as a swine county with such prominent breeders of many years ago as the Kievers—Matt and Ed—who helped to found the Poland China breed; Hays Dill, L. Ervin Parrett Spears, Willard Bitzer, Hugh K. Stewart and others. These breeders were exhibiting swine at all the state fairs from the Rocky Mountains to the Atlantic coast and as far south as Texas twenty years ago.

Walter McCoy belongs in that group also and he is still showing spotted Poland-Chinas.

A prominent livestock man in a recent issue of a farm magazine made the statement that sheep were in the best position of any class of livestock for post-war and gave three reasons.

He stated first that the consumption of lamb has increased somewhat for the last 15 years, although consumption of meat in the United States has, as a whole, decreased. His second reason was that we have been an importer of wool, and this is about the only agricultural live animal product that we have been importing to any great extent. Third, farmers are beginning to learn how to handle sheep, to know more about them, to fit them into the farm program.

A flock of 35 to 50 ewes can be neatly fitted into a livestock program on a 160 acre farm, cleaning up weeds, stubblefield and fence rows.

But do not make the mistake of considering them only as a salvage animal. Sheep need care, feed, special care at lambing time and constant vigilance for parasites.

They bring in two crops per year and the crops are generally marketed at different times of the year. During a war period the amount of money turned over by sheep is much smaller than hogs or beef cattle and there is a great demand for both pork and beef at this time. This very fact strengthens the sheep position for the post-war period.

GREEN AND BLACK BOOK OF NAMES HOLD KEY TO SPY RING'S ACTIVITIES

ter of an illustrious family, schooled in a European convent, cultured and traveled and an established figure in Detroit society.

Her grandfather, the FBI reports, was at one time fourth richest man in Canada. She had come here in 1941. Despite French ancestry and her British citizenship she was then a graduate of the Gestapo school, skilled in secret inks and messages, armed with a list of "contacts," financed with a $2,500 bankroll and a $500 monthly salary and intent on betraying the military secrets of this nation to Germany.

Fond Of Jewels

Only five feet tall, weighing 105 pounds and blue-eyed, she tripped around Detroit on size four and a half shoes, affecting long diamond studded earrings and genuine diamond necklaces.

She broke into Detroit's club world by Nazi order, sponsored by Mrs. Behrens. Her first public appearance here was at a meeting of the Women's Advertising Club. Asked why she came to Detroit, she said with many shrugs and gestures:

"I love water. When I am in New York I hunt for the right apartment. Then, a friend tells me there is in Detroit such an apartment on such a beautiful river. So I take a plane here. So—I am living happily."

The apartment overlooked not only the Detroit river but the heavily guarded naval armory as well.

"When I leave Europe," she said, "I am chased out of Budapest—just ahead of the police. I run. They do not get me. I bring my jewels. At Rome, they take my jewels and hold them. I wait and wait. But I am a fighting Britisher! I say I will not go and the plane cannot go until I get my jewels. Finally, a man brings them."

Her story of continental incidents, international society enchanted Detroiters. She was a romantic, popular figure. Nelson E. Butler, Detroit photostat printer, fell lure to her exotic manner a year ago when a mutual friend brought him to view her art treasures. Today, he is reported in a state of collapse as a result of the FBI's disclosure.

Well Known Club Figure

Tripping about in her Cinderella-sized shoes, the countess lunched and dined at well known clubs. She spoke to various groups, addressed the Charn School at the YWCA, judged fashion shows, appeared on radio programs and was guest of honor at innumerable luncheons. She gave money to the Boy Scouts and registered for the Red Cross.

All this was intended to make her entrance successful. It was. Today, these same people were appalled by the FBI's stirring charges.

"We deeply regret the whole thing," said Mrs. William E. Matthews, YWCA president. "We should withhold judgment until we hear what is said in court. I knew Mrs. Behrens as a sincere worker, we are stunned."

Albert Stutsman, president of the Women's advertising club, said:

"We all liked the countess. Maybe she was working as a counter spy as her contribution to the war effort."

their money and years of working time if they pay more for the land than it is worth. Farms which had been in the hands of Ohio families for three of four generations were lost through forced sales after World War I.

No economist can tell how much any individual can make from a farm. Some farmers can make more from one piece of land than other men could. The economists, however, advise every Ohio farmer to consider well before encumbering present land holdings with heavy mortgage indebtedness in order to get funds to buy more land.

Sue Blank, president a year ago when the countess made her maiden Detroit speech, said:

"I didn't care much for her. She was typically continental and effervescent. But I thought she didn't ring true so I didn't see much of her."

Another wondered about her "funds." Mary Morgan, a Detroit radio fashion editor, closest friend of the countess, refused to discuss the indictment.

None of the women ever saw the little book, but in that book were the names of Mrs. Behrens and Dr. Thomas of the Eaton Tower, the highly-respected Detroit physician who cloaked his alleged Nazi allegiance under a cloud of sympathy, friendliness and "intense medical research."

The FBI claims Dr. Thomas poisoned the minds of his many German patients with Nazi propaganda, spawned anti-Semitism in fertile ground and formed the network for the international intrigue.

How the FBI uncovered the gay countess and her abortive plot, they will not tell. There are no details yet, of that denouement. Nor her counter-espionage agreement.

On whatever basis it was made, FBI agents reveal a deal was made in which the countess went her way, continuing to gather military production information, to meet with associates and transmit information to Nazi associates in Europe through established devious channels.

Whatever she did—an FBI man knew it. Wherever she went an FBI man was near. Whoever she saw was seen by the FBI. "We know her most intimate secrets," said John S. Bugas, Detroit FBI agent.

The countess' messages were dictated by FBI men in consultation with Navy and Army Intelligence officers. All were double-checked to prevent double-double-cross.

Kept in "Good Standing"

Information in those messages was important—but harmless. It kept the countess in good standing with her Nazi superiors as a capable spy and lulled possible suspicion.

That good standing was maintained to the point the Nazis twice sent her substantial sums of money.

Two other characters in this seemingly fictional tale are Sari deHajek and her husband, Guyula Rozenek, both temporarily safe somewhere in the Nazis' crumbling Fortress Europe.

Sari won considerable renown on the Pacific coast as a lecturer on European culture. She was an exchange scholar at Vassar but her husband, less suave, later blundered. He was fired from a job with a west coast chemical company when caught "snooping" among maps and drawings of oil refineries.

Both fled the country. The countess and her group stayed behind to reap the harvest of their poisoned seeds. The little book also remained.

On that book today the FBI today hopes to reveal a story soon that will out-Hollywood anything Hollywood has produced.

INCONSISTENCY SOMEWHERE

This is the strange but unfortunately not unique story of a woman who wanted to work, and a war industry that needed her services. They got together at long last, in spite of government regulations.

The young woman is the wife of a soldier. She was employed by a war industry, and had arranged the time of her vacation when she learned suddenly that her husband was coming home on furlough—probably his last before leaving for overseas fighting service.

She asked to have her vacation advanced so it could be spent with her husband. The request was refused.

"I'm taking it then, anyway," she warned, and her employer retorted: "If you do you're fired."

She did take the time off, spent it with her husband, and when she returned to the plant she found that she was discharged. So she went to another large war plant where she found an opening. But under government regulations, the employer who needed her services could not offer her a job until she obtained a release from the employer who had discharged her.

The employer who had discharged her was spiteful enough to refuse to give her a release. And the government agency to which she appealed could not issue her a statement of availability until her former employer confirmed the discharge.

One employer didn't want her because she was so human as to wish to spend her husband's last furlough with him instead of taking her vacation alone a few weeks later, after hubby had started for Italy, France, Australia, Burma or some other equally unhealthy spot. The other employer did want her. But neither could do anything about it, because of regulations designed to assure that war industries shall obtain all the manpower that can possibly be made available to them.

Meanwhile the wife of a soldier, dependent for her living upon what she can earn while her husband fights for the American way of life, couldn't get a chance to earn anything.

The vicious circle was broken and the young woman got her job only after, having gone from one office of the government agency to another, she found an administrator with imagination enough to cut some corners.

If the situation had been left to the red tape that controlled most of subordinates who deal with such cases, nothing ever would have happened.

If the moral isn't evident, then the story has not been told properly.

Remote Control's a Girl!

SOMEWHERE IN THE MIDDLE EAST—The officer driving the little staff car glanced at the three-ton truck as he passed it, looked puzzled, and slowed down to let it rumble by him again.

Then he passed it a second time signalling it to stop.

"How do you keep your vehicle running from the roof?" he asked a girl in the uniform of the British Auxiliary Territorial Service who was perched up there enjoying the breeze. "I've been watching you for sometime now and can see no sign of a driver."

Before the girl could answer, a small voice from the inside of the cab piped up: "That's only the second driver, sir." And the door opened to reveal a tiny woman, also in an A. T. S. uniform.

Axis: The Allies did not ask for invasion or bombing or war itself. The Axis invaded innocent countries, bombed cities without any regard to saving harmless civilians. In making unprovoked war it asked for war. It is getting now only what it asked for, and by uttering two words it can halt invasion before it begins, it can keep every plane on the ground, it can cause every munition-making nation to beat its swords into ploughshares, its spears into pruning hooks and glad enough they would be to do it. What the United Nations are now seeking to accomplish is that "nation shall not lift up sword against nation, neither shall they learn war any more."

But the Axis has never shown good judgment. So it will not save its own people. The Allies have no choice. The bombs will continue to fall. The invading forces, now ready and marking time, will march on to Berlin. The day of the great crossing, so eagerly awaited, draws near.

It's too bad we can't put a few lumps of ice in the fireplace and keep cool.

Washington at a Glance

By JACK STINNETT

WASHINGTON—The capital in wartime:

Some of the big guns have been blasting away recently at the State Department, with consequent rumors that our eldest statesman, Secretary Cordell Hull is about to shake up his staff.

Take such rumors with a handful of salt. If the venerable Mr. Hull shakes up his staff, it won't be because of sniping from outside or inside the government.

Secretary Hull is the only true log-cabin statesman left in the government today and while that hasn't much to do with it, he occupies the unique position in President's Roosevelt's cabinet of having the complete confidence of the Congress.

Some of his theories (reciprocal trade treaties, to mention the most outstanding) have come in for Congressional criticism, but that hasn't weakened his standing, and in the long run, he has gotten almost everything from "the Hill" he has asked for.

That gives him a margin of safety that few in the government enjoy and while there's no doubt that some of the blasts have been partially, at least, justifiable, there also are a good many accomplishments to which the State Department can point with pride.

Some of the faults that exist lie in the fact that the State Department, even perhaps more than the Army and Navy, is composed of "career-men" which has resulted in political cliques within the department. These factions, while not necessarily shirking their obligations to the government, are too frequently angling for intra-departmental controls.

But put it down that as long as Hull is satisfied with his staff, no matter how much family bickering they indulge in behind the scenes, there will be no drastic changes in it. At the moment, the "career men" are riding the crest and have almost crowded out the "political" interlopers. As long as Hull is secretary, they're likely to stay that way.

If you had all the reported reasons why Harry Hopkins and his family are moving out of the White House, they would reach from here to the bottom of the column, back to the top of the next and down again.

The one we like best came from a "close friend" of Lend-Lease Allocator Hopkins. He said: "Well, Harry just figured that if he stayed on there, he might embarrass the President in his chances for a fourth term."

Washington workers who eat in the Navy cafeteria, where the great French chef from New York is now making the meals something completely out of this world's old stewpan, have one big kick.

Apple pie has disappeared from the menu. What they get instead, they claim, is something called "apple tart," which may be strictly French and very delicious—but "it ain't apple pie."

What Is Your Type Lateral or Linear?

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M.D.

IF WE UNDERSTOOD human growth completely, we would understand many of the unsolved problems of nutrition. For instance, a boy from aged five to aged thirteen is generally eating quite a hefty set of meals, but he hardly grows at all. Then all of a sudden he starts to grow like a house afire with no increase in the amount of food he takes in.

Dr. Clendening will answer questions of general interest only, and then only through his column.

Certainly an increase in body size requires proportionate nutrition, so why doesn't he grow from five on when he is doing all that eating. Then at eighteen, or thereabouts, again without any manifest change in his food habits, he stops growing. And you could pile extra food into him until Doomsday but still he wouldn't grow any more. Some say it is his glands, but you can stuff him with glands and not the width of a thumbnail will he grow.

The Stocky Type

Different groups of people show certain tendencies to grow along lines of both height and weight. And these result in types. The stocky types tend to be short, the slender types tend to be tall. There are all sorts of gradations in between.

These types have come in for a great deal of study, by anthropologists and physicians, who conclude that certain types are fitted for certain work and are subject to certain stresses in life.

For instance, the Japanese as a racial characteristic are stocky. In height the average Japanese is 155 centimeters, as against an Iowa farmer's average of 176. In weight the Japanese is 2940 grams against the Iowa's 3400. The Japanese is carrying considerably more grams per centimeter than the American and this is all in muscle and bone. He can be predicted to have more endurance in marching and in staying on long watches. Will power, of course, being equal, and we should have learned by this time not to underestimate our enemy on that.

Linear and Lateral People

As applied to medical practice the doctrine of constitutional types has had many proponents. Their classifications of individual bodily types differ slightly, but the general principles are the same. There are in general the linear and the lateral kinds of people. And it must be evident to anyone who does the least bit of thinking on the subject that they are fated to have different troubles in life. There is the dyspeptic, and the apoplectic, and the consumptive and the enthusiastic and the phlegmatic and the nervous and the stable—all types just as much related to the kinds of bodies they inhabit as a cactus is related to the desert, or an elm to watershed country.

Not, of course, that this is all there is to the causation of disease. There is environment, home training in childhood, heredity, and the accidents of germs and occupation. But it teaches us to individualize in treating patients.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

B. M.:—What is myocardial disease, or possible coronary embolism?

Answer: "Myo" means muscle, and "cardial" means heart. So myocardial means heart muscle disease. Coronary embolism means a clot of blood in a small artery of the heart. When this occurs, the nourishment to the heart muscle supplied by that artery suffers and myocardial disease results.

R. L. A.:—Do infant warts on a person around thirty go away as they do on children?

Answer: Yes, but you can help by the time-honored treatment of getting a half-ounce bottle of formalin at the drug store and dabbing the wart with the wet cork every once in a while.

CHAPTER FORTY-FOUR

IF IT WASN'T just like Marty, Karen thought, to turn tables by questioning her as to her right on her own private beach, when she was the one who should demand an explanation of his presence, not only of his presence, but of that revolver still clutched in his hand.

"Why don't you go ahead and shoot me?" she asked coolly; all panic had fled now that she knew that dark shadow was only Marty, although why he should always be lurking around her tunnel was beyond her.

He gave a short, low laugh, slipped the offending revolver back into a pocket. "I didn't know you might turn out to be." He seemed to consider that explanation enough to satisfy her. He said again in the same lowered tone of admonition, "You know, Kay, you are not allowed on the beach after dark, even if it does happen to be a part that you consider belongs to you. No one is allowed here. Why do you think they blacked out this whole coastal territory, even dimming out the town across the bridge so there would be no lumen in the sky to show up the silhouettes of passing ships? All these rules and regulations simply have to be obeyed. Besides, it isn't safe for you, a girl, to be down here all alone."

"I'm safe now that you're here," Karen reminded him, a bit flippantly. She was the one who wanted to laugh, so as not to be too angry at his high and mighty manner. Telling HER about rules and regulations when he was the one who was breaking them. "May I ask," she made her voice coolly polite now, "what YOU are doing here then, since, as you point out, those rules have to be obeyed?"

"Sure you can ask," Marty returned almost as flippantly, "but I don't have to answer."

"You're good at that—not answering."

"I thought you said you'd take me on trust, no matter what the answers seemed to be."

She would, she did in her own heart, in his defense to others. But with this new evidence adding to all the rest, how could she help being worried? If her faith in Marty were destroyed, she would never have faith in anyone again.

"I would—if you'd let me," she said. "Oh, Marty, what is this all about? Why don't you try trusting ME for a change?"

He was silent a moment; then he said abruptly, "All right, I will, although that's against rules and regulations, too. I'm here, Kay, on business, big official business. For the present I can't say much more than that. I'm waiting for something I'm sure has been going on for quite some time and will go on again tonight."

"You're still talking in riddles," she told him wearily. He knew she could not understand what he was driving at. Why must he persist in all this mystery? "I think you enjoy being mysterious. Official business, indeed! On our beach, late at night, when there's no one about anywhere or anything . . ."

"Bhh!" Marty took a step, catching her arm in a tight grip. "Not so loud, Mata Hari. How do you know no one is around? I've warned you that this tunnel, still unlocked, by the way, would serve as an excellent hiding place. I've used it myself for that very purpose. You cannot be too careful in times like these. Remember all the warning about talking and that talk alone often sinks our ships!"

"You seem to be doing a lot that doesn't mean anything." She tried to shake off his hold on her arm. She did not want to get angry with Marty—it was not all anger. It was partly her fear for him, but he persisted in making her feel that way, it seemed. The idea of his admitting he had used the tunnel for a hide-out, although whatever for he still would not explain. The nerve of his talking about ships being sunk and calling her the name of a notorious spy when he must be tied up in some way with some such furtive things.

"I know," he said. "I don't expect you to get it all—yet. But you will in time. You must be getting back to the house now, Kay."

"I'm in no hurry." Did he think she would go and leave him here? "But you must . . . PLEASE. There may be trouble."

"Well, you have a gun. That should protect us." She let him see that she still did not like the looks of things and was not afraid.

"I hope I won't have any use for it. But your being here might make it necessary. Please, Kay, I know what I'm talking about. It will be much better if you go on home like a good little girl and—Wait!"

He grabbed her arm again in a grip much more fierce than that first time. She could feel his whole body stiffen, his eyes straining in the darkness. But he was not looking toward the beach and the sea, but toward the big house, a huge dark shadow among the trees, its lights shielded by the heavy curtains required for all windows facing the ocean. Not all, though, for now Karen thought she saw what it was that Marty was looking at, what had caused him suddenly to grow so tense, to stop what he had been saying so abruptly, for there was a tiny flicker of light, a flicker that moved back and forth slowly, then went out.

"The tower!" Karen gasped. For the light she had thought she had seen, although maybe she only had imagined it, had come from the high tower of the big house.

"That's right!" Marty's grip relaxed a little, but his tone still was brusque. There seemed no doubt as to his questioning his imagination. "That's what I've been waiting for," he added soberly. "Had to make certain, although I was pretty sure. But wait, it should go on again."

They waited together, Karen as tense now as he, her eyes strained toward that high point, too, her back to the sea. It was a moment too tense for her to weigh all the implications as to what that tiny flicker of light, moving backward and forward as if in some sort of signal, might mean. Yet her own description brought a flood of memories . . . signal . . . ships being sunk at the rate of two a day as fast as they could be turned out . . . someone nearby who must be getting through with some sort of message . . . enemy subs lurking in those dark waters, getting their prey in spite of the blackout, all precautions . . . in this area, as near as her own beach, Paul had said.

"There it goes again!" Marty's hold on her arm tightened.

They watched again together the tiny, yet penetrating stream of light, a beacon reaching long fingers out into the blackness, moving slowly, ominously backward and forward, repeated now in three successive movements, then as swiftly extinguished.

There was no question now as to having imagined what Karen knew she had seen with her own eyes.

Martin dropped his hold on her arm abruptly; she saw his one hand go into the pocket that she knew held his revolver. He started forward toward the tunnel with long, swift strides.

"You're not going up there . . . not leaving me here?" Karen's own feet brought her after him almost without conscious volition, and not because she did not want to be left alone, but because again she was frightened for him, not knowing what he meant to do, what he might have to face.

"There's not a second to lose," he said. "You can stay here, or come along—as far as the house, I mean. But I have to reach the tower before that light signals again, or before whoever is doing it gets away, which would be worse."

He had not stopped as he spoke, but continued on through the dark tunnel, Karen at his heels. She could hardly keep up with him. At the side entrance to the house he stopped a brief second to turn to murmur, "The back stairs, show me to them. I remember the others leading from the second floor."

Karen took the lead, almost running now, on silent feet, thanks to the thick carpeting. There was only one light downstairs, the narrow edge coming from beneath the closed door of her father's study, where he would be reading and smoking; there would not be any lights upstairs except the one left in the hall throughout the night.

At the narrow stairway on the second floor that led on up into the tower Martin again stepped in front of her. He did not say anything, but he gave her a little push with his hand to show her she must stay there, keep out of his way. Then he started up those winding stairs stealthily, cautiously.

Civil War Breaks Out Among Hoboes

By CLAYTON IRWIN

All is not well within the ranks of America's hoboes, what with one too many kings and a nasty hint of commercialism in the air.

From his headquarters on Sasfras street, Cincinnati, King Jeff Davis of the Hoboes of America, Inc., growls contemptuously at Ben Benson, king of the Hobo Fellowship Union and of the Hobo War League.

From his headquarters in New York, the diminutive Benson says nothing at all. He's too busy right now, being road editor of the "Hobo News," an incredible publication wherein, if you look closely among the crude cartoons and reprints of famous ballads, you might even find some news of the hobo.

Internal Strife

The internal strife has been going on since the day a couple of years ago when Benson was elected king at a convention in Britt, Iowa. Jeff Davis, Benson claims, didn't even show up at the convention.

But Davis contends hobo interests are represented only by the Hoboes of America, Inc., also known as the International Migratory Workers' Union, of which he has been elected the head man for life.

Incongruous Air

"From time to time," he says in a communique dripping with contempt, "we have been misjudged as a part of that one-man paper, the "Hobo News" . . . imposters, tramps and bums, to make an easy living, stand on the corner and yell 'Hobo News.'"

There is, in fact, a note of incongruity around the office of the "Hobo News," where an assorted staff turns out, every two weeks, 75,000 copies at 10 cents a copy, of the tabloid printed on bilious green, yellow or pink paper.

The publication's masthead identifies the publisher as Pat Mulken who, according to the office staff, is an old side-kick of Benson's and was known in the best hobo circles as "The Roaming Dreamer." Mulken brought out the first edition of the Hobo News eight years ago on an old $50 hand press, and Benson was one of the first street-corner vendors.

Things look a lot different now. Publication offices are in a Fifty-second street building in New York upon whose front has been painted a weird mural representing a hobo jungle scene. There are other murals on the walls inside, along with huge signs reading "A Hard Day's Work Never Hurt Anyone—Neither Did A Good Day's Rest" and "No Papers Sold to Drunks, Mission Stiffs or Jungle Buzzards."

In the back room is a typesetting machine, a compositor's bank and a flatbed press that grinds out 3,000 copies of the paper an hour.

How many hoboes buy the "Hobo News," the publishers cannot say, but they insist that at one time 75 bona-fide hoboes were agents in various parts of the country.

The king is a frequent visitor in the office, although he also spends much time on the road, which seems logical for the road editor of a hobo paper.

San Juan, capital of Puerto Rico, has a population of 170,000.

Dehydrated and Frozen Foods Forum Subject

By GARETH MUCHMORE
The postwar housewife may be able to ask the grocer for "a frozen chicken dinner for six," thaw it, heat it, and invite the guests to sit down.

That's merely one possibility predicted for frozen foods at an industry-sponsored forum on the food industry, sponsored by the magazine, Trusts and Estates.

Dehydrated foods also have bright prospects, despite what happened after the last war, when they virtually were eliminated from the market because there was little demand for them.

Lewis W. Waters, vice president of General Foods, Corp., said chief obstacles dehydrated meat surmount are those of changed taste and appearance.

Waters said items most promising for dehydration are mashed potatoes, to which only hot milk or water need be added; soups, which already are on grocery shelves; baked beans, and citrus fruit juices.

E. J. Mather, vice president of National Dairy Products Corp., said it was likely dehydrated whole milk would become an important competitor to the fluid product in some markets, particularly exports.

Armstrong's Ring Career Ends Amid Boos As He Is Beaten

By TED MEIER
NEW YORK, Aug. 28.—(AP)—The amazing ring saga of Henry Armstrong ended permanently at Madison Square Garden last night amid boos and catcalls at the scene of some of his greatest triumphs.
The famous career of the 32-year-old former triple title holder came to grief against the flicking fists of youth Ray "Sugar" Robinson who walked to an easy 10-round decision before 15,371. The gross gate was $60,789.31.

-Spying- On Sports By Hugh Fullerton, Jr.

NEW YORK, Aug. 28.—(AP)—It's hard to blast a fellow who has given fight fans their money's worth as often as Hank Armstrong but Henry's announcement last night he was through with boxing, except as manager of Cecil Hudson, was long overdue. . . We never saw Armstrong at his best, but we'd much prefer to remember him as the little fellow who won three world championships and lost them gamely than as the outworn prize fighter who shuffled around the ring swaying his head like a sea lion begging for a fish. . . With that weaving style, Henry was as hard to hit as the swinging target in a shooting gallery—and Ray Robinson didn't win any marksmanship medals.

George Strickler, the national football league tub thumper, claims he's going to protest the Chicago All-Star game because 20 points for the stars were scored by ineligible players. "Harder and Graham are only college juniors," he insists. "They're not eligible until next year."

Brews' Lead Stretched as Birds Beaten

(By the Associated Press)
Milwaukee jumped into a 3-1-2 game lead in the American Association pennant race last night by beating Indianapolis 4 to 3 while second-place Columbus was losing to St. Paul, the cellar team, 8 to 2.
With Ray Blaemire, former Redbird, leading the attack with a triple and a double, St. Paul shelled Jack Creel from the mound in the sixth inning after touching him for nine hits and seven runs. Columbus scored twice in the initial frame, but Art Herring then settled down to blank the flock the rest of the way, turning in a 4-hit job for his 103rd victory since first joining the Saints.
Toledo remained in the first division by downing Minneapolis 2 to 1.
The Kansas City Blues climbed from the basement by whipping Louisville twice, 9-2 and 1-0, the second game going 10 innings and featuring 14 strikeouts by the Blues' Johnny Johnson.

SOFTBALL SEASON ENDS WITH GRANGE DEFEAT

The last of the "Y" sponsored softball games was played at Wilson Field Friday night when an all-star group of members of the other teams in the Recreation League defeated the league-winning Fayette Grangers by a 3-0 shutout.

3 Heats Won By Doctor S

Doctor S, Elmer Junk's comeback pacer, today was looking for race horses after having added three more heats to his already imposing list of triumphs for this season.
"Doc" came away from the races at the Athens County Fair with his score for the season raised to 10 wins against nine defeats. Adding to his fame for comebacks, he made a romp of all three heats at Athens with Frank Lanum handling the reins. Faith in him had begun to fade a bit when he disappointed his admirers at the Fair here. Indications now are that he has hit his stride in his class and, barring bad racing luck, his owner expects him to go on adding to his earnings.

Reds Wallop Cardinals in Close Game

CINCINNATI, Aug. 28.—(AP)—Bucky Walters last night, before the largest crowd of the season to witness a Cincinnati Reds game under the Crosley Field lights, mastered the world champion St. Louis Cardinals, 3 to 2.
The Cards got their two runs in the second and third innings, but after the fourth frame, Bucky began to "fog 'em in" and only one Cardinal was able to connect safely.
The Reds bunched three hits in the fourth inning to tie the score, when Frank McCormick smacking a double after singles by Max Marshall and Bert Haas. Marshall was the hitting star of the evening with four safeties and Bert Haas got three out of four trips to the plate.
Walters wound up the game in a blaze of glory by fanning two pinch-hitters in the ninth inning. Howie Krist was the loser.
Manager Billy Southworth of the Cards is sending his ace, Morton Cooper, against Ray Starr in today's game.

GRAIN MARKET NEWS SUMMARY
CHICAGO, Aug. 28.—(AP)—Grains opened on good advances today as the tight situation in feed grains continued unchanged. Traders appeared to be bullish influenced by the statement last night of War Food Administrator Marvin Jones that farm prices will be supported by the government at levels high enough to cover the added "risks and hazards" involved in the increased food output plans.
Wheat started 1/4-1/2 higher, September 1.46, oats gained 1/4-1/2 with the September contract at a new 25-year peak of 74 1/2, and rye was ahead 1/2-3/4, September 1.04 1/2-1/4.

ALASKA THE BASE

TO ATTACK JAPAN

So Says Commander Back

From Aleutian Operations

AN ADVANCED ALEUTIANS BASE, Aug. 28—(AP)—Lt. Gen. John L. DeWitt, back from an inspection trip to Attu Island—the westernmost point of his command—is determined that "we must carry the war to the Japanese; we must wage in and tear Japan apart, and dynamite and gut her with incendiaries."

"Today we have only Japan to fight. If we wait for Japan to organize the countries she has overrun we will be fighting the most heavily manpowered nation in the world."

"Alaska is the base from which to launch an offensive. Today we have a chain of bases extending from San Francisco to Attu to carry out Tokyo's ultimate destruction."

'FOOD FOR ATTACK'

LONDON, Aug. 28—(P)—Food Minister Lord Woolton told a meeting at Bolton today that he was building up reserves labelled "food for attack," for this reason, he said, he had no intentions of increasing England's food rations at present.

Many Stores Here To Continue Thursday Closing

HELP SHORTAGE GIVEN AS ONE OF MAIN REASONS

Overworked Clerks Better If Given Rest, Is Belief; Many Cities Do It

The scarcity of merchandise and shortage of labor are given as reasons for the continuation of Thursday afternoon closing by a number of uptown food and mercantile concerns, as announced in a special advertisement in today's paper.

Scheduled originally as a summer emergency to allow employees time for work in victory gardens and to help on farms, a number of store managers and owners felt that the mid-week half-holiday is a help in conducting their business.

As one uptown retailer expressed it: "We're working too speed every hour we're open, and with the labor situation each employee is doing about one-half more than formerly. The Thursday afternoon rest is a needed and valued period and our firm is happy to continue it."

The stores which plan to close feel that the public is more than willing to cooperate with the movement, as shown during the summer months and it is pointed out that in many surrounding cities such half-holidays are being continued until further notice.

According to present plans, the stores included in the closing agreement may work full time during December if the public demands it and, of course, no Thursday closing will be observed in the weeks in which there is a regular legal holiday, it was said.

Both management and employees benefit greatly by the Thursday half-holiday according to the stores, since vacations have been curtailed, due to the shortage of help one merchant pointed out, adding: "I missed out on vacation this summer and a regular weekly bit of golf or fishing has certainly helped make up for this."

The money provided by the bonds was used to pave Clinton Avenue with brick from Court Street to the corporation limits.

SOME CITY STREETS TO BE TREATED

Complete Repairs Are Not Possible This Year

Surface treatment for city streets here will be limited to "important" thoroughfares and streets badly in need of treatment, City Manager Edwin Ducey said today.

"This is a war year and we can't get the materials to make all the improvements we'd like to make," he explained.

The work could be completed in two weeks with ideal weather conditions and if all the necessary materials can be obtained when they are needed, Ducey said.

NEW HOLLANDER'S WATER IS SOFT NOW

Hard Water There Is Thing Of Past

No more "hard water blues" for housewives now!

When New Holland women complained of increasing hardness of the city water supply, the Board of Public Affairs employed an acting engineer from Burgess and Niple of Columbus to correct the chemical analysis. A recent letter from the company assured Board President Edward Kirkpatrick and Nolan Eckle, superintendent of the waterworks, that "the plant is continuing to turn out water of excellent sanitary quality and very satisfactory hardness—the structure (of the waterworks) presents a very acceptable appearance and the grounds around the plant have been kept in good shape."

A quantity of lime sediment for use as fertilizer is available at the receiving pools of the waterworks plant for those who desire it.

WADE'S STORE OPENS SEPT. 3 INSTEAD OF 2

Opening date for Wade's new shoe store has been changed from Sept. 2 to Friday, Sept. 3, O. O. Wade said today. He explained that when he set the opening date for next Thursday, he thought that all the merchants would remain open all day instead of closing at noon as has been the custom during the summer months.

Since some of the merchants are going to continue the practice of closing, Wade decided to postpone the opening one day in order to take advantage of a full day's trade.

CALLS DURING BLACKOUTS, AIR RAIDS, TABOO

Telephone Lines Are Needed For Emergency Calls

"Too many people are calling in during air raid and black-out alerts," Col. Rell G. Allen, secretary of the Fayette County Council on Civilian Defense said today, adding that these telephone calls interfere with defense activities.

State Defense Director Ralph H. Stone has urged Ohioans to refrain from using the telephone in the event of an emergency in their communities. He revealed that "curiosity calls" had caused a near break-down of communication in a number of cities recently.

Specifically classifying test blackouts, daylight air raids drills, airplane accidents and major fires as emergencies, Stone said that telephone offices and the switchboards of newspapers and fire departments in many Ohio cities and towns had been flooded with calls from persons wishing merely to check on real or reported disasters.

As a result, he said, telephone lines were "jammed" and where the emergency was real, defense corps officials were "held up" and delayed in dispatching trained volunteers to the scene of action."

In this connection, he pointed out that civilian defense depends on the telephone for the transmission of public air raid warnings and that if an enemy attack actually developed and the lines were clogged with "curiosity calls", lives and property would be endangered.

Stone said that in Toledo recently a large business and residential district was without electric power for some time. Thousands of unnecessary calls poured into the telephone office and "service bogged down nearly to the breaking point."

When the Ohio River flooded its banks last spring, telephone lines at East Liverpool, Wellsburg, Steubenville, Bellaire, Marietta, Gallipolis, Portsmouth and Manchester were tied up constantly, he disclosed.

A bomber crash several months ago at Newark and the tornadoes this summer in Sandusky, Huron, Seneca, Stark, Trumbull, Summit, Cuyahoga and Medina counties also taxed telephone facilities to the limit. When a gasoline tank car caught fire at Tiffin and an ammunition train exploded elsewhere in the state, telephone company officials reported that "calls swamped our boards."

The state defense director pointed out that telephone lines were needed for vital war calls and that unnecessary inquiries in times of emergency tie up communications and delay the dispatching of necessary personnel and equipment.

He expressed the hope that war-conscious Ohioans would use their telephones only for "absolutely necessary calls and refrain from dialing information, the newspapers or the police stations each time an unusual event occurs."

Nevski Cathedral in Sofia at which prayers were offered for the King's recovery.

A dispatch from Ankara said a brief announcement of the King's illness made in a Bulgarian broadcast led to the belief in some Turkish quarters that the King may have been the victim of an assassination attempt.

Istanbul heard wholly-unverified reports that the King suffered a heart attack after an unpleasant two-day conference at the headquarters of Adolf Hitler during which the Nazi leader became enraged and attempted to strike the monarch. Hitler was said to have demanded Bulgarian support in the war against Russia.

PILOTLESS WARPLANE SENT OUT BY NAZIS

STOCKHOLM, Aug. 28—(P)—The newspaper Aftonbladet reported today in a dispatch from Malmoe that a pilotless German plane had crashed on the Danish island of Bornholm in the Baltic Sea and said there were indications that the craft was radio-controlled.

Investigators, the dispatch said, could find no place in the plane for a pilot.

The dispatch caused immediate speculation here as to whether the plane might be one of the secret weapons about which the Germans have been boasting.

Bornholm is located about 25 miles off the southernmost tip of Sweden, directly across the Baltic from Peenemuende, site of a big German experimental laboratory which the RAF bombed on August 17.

FIRE CHIEF SEES ACTION SHOW IN OSU STADIUM

'Action Overhead' Shows Civilian Defense Under War Conditions

"That stadium literally shook," Fire Chief George Hall said today in describing the civilian defense spectacle, "Action Overhead," which he and his wife attended Friday night in the Ohio State University Stadium in Columbus.

Hall described the show, depicting what might happen during an air raid on Columbus, "as well worth any Civilian Defense official's time." He said that the workings of Civilian Defense were illustrated under stimulated air raid conditions.

"There were about ten frame buildings constructed—just like an ordinary street scene—and when bombs went off, boards and planks and timbers flew in all directions," Hall said.

Burning incendiary bombs were extinguished by sand, a solid stream of water, garden hose and one and one-half inch hose. "One soldier threw a bucket of water on a magnesium bomb to show what happens in case a housewife tries to put one out by throwing dish-water on it. The water scattered the magnesium for forty feet," he said, adding that the method was extremely dangerous.

Incendiary bombs were set off in model attics, one full of rubbish, and the other cleared out with several inches of sand on the floor, he said. The incendiary in the cluttered attic set the house on fire in no time while the sand on the floor of the other extinguished the bomb, he declared.

"Two flame throwers were demonstrated and they shot out a blast of flame at least forty feet long. Only one man is needed to operate one," Hall continued.

Burning thermite pots on oil and water, white phosphorus packages—German "calling cards"—white phosphorus bombs, solid oil bombs and primacord were also demonstrated in the display executed by 46 officers and enlisted men in chemical warfare division of the army.
